Defibrillator Training

18 people turned up to our first training session, which is a great start. It was also a good social occasion - three people who have lived in the village for over 20 years had never met each other before! 'Defibrillator training' is actually a misnomer, as really we are learning about giving first aid in the form of CPR (cardio-pulmonary resuscitation) in the event of a heart attack. CPR must begin immediately while someone else goes to fetch the defib. Time is that crucial!

Our next training session will be Tuesday, 16th October, 7.30pm in The Old Bakery. Please email me or leave a message on the answerphone (see 'useful contacts')

Armistice Commemoration.

The church has been faithfully marking the anniversary of The Armistice for a hundred years and I have realised that it would be somewhat odd for the village to hold a separate event. So let us all join together in the church on Remembrance Sunday to mark this significant and poignant occasion.

Thefts

As you may have heard, a car was stolen from someone in the village last month. This was from their garage in the daytime while they were at home! With several building projects going on in the village and endless home deliveries it is much easier for unusual activity to slip under the radar. I would not want us to develop a 'stranger-danger' mentality but just to be a bit more alert and security conscious

Village Forum

Just a reminder that our next forum will be on Thursday 8th November, 7.30pm in The Old Bakery. If you have any topics you'd like raised for discussion, please let me know. An Agenda will be published in next month's News.

North Aston Nature Notes

With Stephen Rees

The last few mornings have had mist hanging low in the valley, with the treetops showing through above it, and looking very pretty. Conkers and acorns are now on the ground, waiting to be picked up by children or squirrels, and the hedges are starting to turn, slowly, from green to hot bronze, yellow, and other lovely colours. Autumn, my favourite season, is slowly creeping upon us, although it seems slower in arriving than other years.

I think it will be a poor year for fungi. I have found very little so far, and no Field Mushrooms (or Prince, as they should be called) and no Horse Mushrooms – the really big ones – but maybe it's still a bit too early. Keep your eyes on the corner of the Green, opposite the Fountain, as it's always good for the Shaggy Ink Caps.

A few people, as they did in September, have mentioned they have had holes dug in their lawns. This is definitely Badgers, and I have also noticed that lots of cow-pats in the fields have been turned over as well. They are rooting around in the lawns looking for Leather-Jacket grubs (which will soon develop into Craneflies and emerge to batter themselves against our windows of an evening), and they dig up the cow-pats for worms.

A couple of weeks ago, very early in the morning, a big skein of Geese flew overhead and Penny and I were out for her walk, and it was lovely to see. They formed a perfect triangle, and I could hear them calling. We could have been in Scotland, or on the Wash. Penny looked up at me as if to say, well, go on then, shoot one!

Our Bantams' favourite food is sweetcorn. Their second-favourite is Dock leaves, which I pick for them every morning. They go mad for the leaves! They rip them apart, and eat them really fast. I was thinking the other day, as I was picking them, how we used them as kids (and still do) to soothe the pain of Stinging Nettles. Then I suddenly thought, my God, am I drugging the Bantams? Are they sitting awake at night, waiting for their daily fix of Dock leaves to give them a high? So, I Googled "Dock", and found loads of information. They are actually really good plants, having a close chemical relationship with Aloe Vera, but they also contain a bit of alcohol as well. They are also edible, with a tart lemony taste when young. I think I'm going to do a bit more research into them.

My funniest 'spot' last month came while I was out on a morning walk with Penny. She ran forward, which is unusual for her, and put up a Peacock from a stand of long grass! Flippin' heck! Last month it was a Budgie, this month a Peacock. Apparently, it has been in Tom and Viv's garden, and I think Norman has seen it as well. Perhaps it has wandered over from Grange Farm?

October is as good a month as any to see hedgehogs, so keep an eye open and let us know if you see any. Be very careful when lighting garden bonfires as well, and check there aren't any hiding underneath. At the moment we still have a few Swallows down here, so enjoy them while you can, as they will be leaving any day now.

That's all for now, Steve, Wendy & Penny

Something else to look out for this month is the insect activity around the Ivy, which is now in flower. Butterflies, hoverflies, moths (at night) and, of course, wasps are attracted to the flowers, which are some of the few sources of nectar at this time of the year. The butterflies, like Tortoiseshells, Red Admirals, Peacocks and the like, are stocking up on the fuel they need to see them through hibernation. Please remember this before cutting back any ivy in your garden, as without it, they'll struggle to survive if we get the harsh Winter we've been promised. Prune at the end of the year instead. Be of Good Voice!

Steeple Aston Choral Society is keen to recruit new members. They have some 30-35 regular singers and are directed by the professional tenor Paul Badley. They are an extremely friendly society and members join for the love of singing, and there is definitely an air of excitement and fun at all rehearsals, as well as serious work. The group always takes a mid-rehearsal break during which they really become a group of friends! The Society is currently working on Mozart's Requiem for a concert in February. Rehearsals are usually on Mondays at 7.45 pm in Steeple Aston Village Hall. If you're interested, pop along to a rehearsal (there are no auditions) or contact them via the Steeple Aston website (www.steepleaston.org.uk) or the Facebook page.

Stephen mentions Hedgehogs in his Nature Notes piece this month, and Kildare has also suggested highlighting some additional information about these delightful, and increasingly scarce little animals this month. As the nights draw in, Hedgehogs are starting to prepare for their Winter hibernation, and that means they'll be busy fattening up in order to survive through to Spring.

There are several ways you can help, and here are some suggestions:

Ensure there are holes in perimeter fences. Hedgehogs travel up to a mile each night foraging for food. Allowing them to pass safely through your garden will help keep them avoid busy roads and provide access to a wider variety of food.

Slugs are a favourite food for Hedgehogs, so please avoid using chemical slug pellets, as this will not only kill the slugs, but could also harm the Hedgehogs. Encourage the Hedgehogs into your garden instead, and let them do the hard work for you!

Bonfire piles are very attractive nesting places for Hedgehogs, so burn your bonfire on the same day that you make it, and if you can't do that, check carefully before setting them alight, making sure that all the occupying wildlife can escape before you set it alight.

Garden ponds can be deathtraps for Hedgehogs, so make sure there's an escape route, such as series of stepping stones, so they can get out if they fall in. Watch out that they don't get entangled in netting.

Hedgehogs need to fatten up before they can hibernate, and they'll love a meaty treat of cat or dog food, either wet or dry, and a drink of fresh water. Make a special Hedgehog Café by cutting a small hole in a storage box and weighing down the lid down with a brick, so that larger animals can't get inside and steal the food.

Contrary to what you may have heard, don't feed Hedgehogs bread or milk, as they can't digest it.

This month's updates and information

Thefts in the Astons

On 20th September, sometime between 13:15 and 14:46, a silver Peugeot 207 estate with roof bars bearing a 58 plate was stolen from a property on the Somerton Road in North Aston. If you have any details please contact TVP by dialling 101 and using reference 43180288060.

It was a busy day for thieves, as the passenger-side window was smashed on a car parked in North Side, Steeple Aston and a lady's handbag was stolen that same day, sometime between 08:45 and 14:10. Reference 43180288320.

Again on the 20th, between 11:20 and 11:30 am, there was another attempted theft from a vehicle in Fenway, Steeple Aston, as well as reports of other vehicles being searched and items stolen, including a set of jump leads. The reference this time is 43180288406.

NFU & TVP Fighting Rural Crime

The National Farmers' Union has teamed up with the charity Crimestoppers to launch a new service for farmers and the public to give information anonymously about rural crime.

The Rural Crime Reporting Line is part of the NFU's ongoing work to tackle the serious issues surrounding criminal attacks on farms and in the wider countryside. By calling the number, or visiting www.ruralcrimereportingline.uk, farmers and the rural public can anonymously give information about crimes such as fly-tipping, hare coursing and machinery or livestock theft.

The service was unveiled in August. The public and landowners are encouraged to use the service to share information about crimes in rural areas, and that includes here in North Aston. Make a note of the number: 0800 783 0137.

West Oxfordshire Neighbourhood Teams are also active in this regard, and will be happy to share security advice for farmhouses, landowners and rural properties. Call 101 and speak to the West Oxfordshire NH team if you have any information relating to the area just south-west of here.

1066: A Medieval Mosaic Exhibition

On show at the Soldiers of Oxfordshire Museum (SOFO Museum) in Woodstock until February next year is a remarkable mosaic representation of the Bayeux tapestry.

The work of one man, Michael Linton, the piece has taken over 30 years to complete and is made from 33 million individual pieces of spring steel. The mosaic now measures 64 metres long and weighs 350kg and is now recognised as the world's largest steel mosaic by the Guinness Book of World Records.

Winter's on the way!

As we move towards shorter days and colder mornings, please remember to stay with your vehicle when defrosting your windscreen. Every year TVP receives reports of vehicles being stolen by opportunist thieves whilst keys are in the ignition.

When the longer winter nights arrive, take a fresh look at your home security. Keep doors locked at all times, with keys and valuables out of sight. If you're out in the evening make sure you leave a light on and draw the curtains. Timer switches are so cheap now - under a fiver - and can be used to turn on Energy-saving lights, and leave a radio on to make a potential burglar think twice. Don't forget about garages, sheds and outbuildings - make sure they're secure too.

Fakes

This message is repeated regularly, but some people are still taken in by fraudsters pretending to be someone they're not. This month, watch out for fake Netflix emails, claiming that there's an account problem. Similarly, be very sceptical about unexpected offers on iTunes vouchers, refunds on TV licences, emails from British Gas (in North Aston?!), business invitations on LinkedIn, demands for payment on overdue BT bills, and strange invoices from companies you've never heard of. It seems many people without the appropriate accounts still fall for these scams. Just ignore them!

The mosaic re-creates the entirety of the original Bayeux Tapestry, including the depiction of the Battle of Hastings, but expands on it with additional historic scenes. In 2005 Michael added an 8 metre 'Finale Section' depicting events leading up to the crowning of William the Conqueror, while a further 22 metres covers the Battles of Fulford and Stamford Bridge. These added scenes bring this recreation close to twice the length of the original Bayeux Tapestry.

The mosaic will be on display until 1st February 2019, throughout the museum's regular opening hours (Tues - Friday 10am to 5pm, Saturdays 11am to 5pm, and Sundays 2pm to 5pm) and is included in the standard admission price of Adults £4.50, Concessions £3.80 and Children (5 - 16) £2.50.

Park Farm celebrated Parkchella last month, on the 15th. We welcomed families, friends and local residents to our yearly event. Our guests were able to enjoy the weather with entertainment such as a bouncy castle and party entertainer! Park Farm provided a scrumptious buffet, of a variety of homemade food and deserts made by the young people at Park Farm. Guests sat and chatted in our chill-out area created from hay barrels and decorations created by the young people. They were also able to enjoy a photograph using funny props in our man-made photo booth. All the guests enjoyed themselves and we would like to thank everybody who attended and supported Parkchella!

A Compassionate Solution to a Shortage of Space

In 2007 a government survey revealed that a quarter of UK burial grounds were already nearing capacity, and by the year 2030, roughly half of all the cemeteries in the UK will be full. In inner-city areas the problem is most pressing, but it is a national concern, and one that looks set to have an impact upon even small rural communities like our own. As you'll read in the vicar's Church Matters piece this month, North Aston churchyard is nearing capacity, and the PCC is having to face the difficult decision of what to do about the shortage of available space.

National records suggest that three quarters (72%) of those who plan ahead, or leave the final decision to surviving relatives, now elect to be cremated. Another small but significant proportion choose a humanist ceremony, linked to a Natural or Woodland burial. These alternatives have relieved some of the pressure on traditional churchyards, but statistics now show that this trend is levelling off. This means that the number of church burials is no longer falling, and parishes across the country face the need to find long-term, workable solutions to an increasingly challenging issue. There are no easy answers, and almost all the options risk upsetting someone.

The simplest solution is often to create a new cemetery elsewhere in the parish. Deddington did this by establishing the Hempton Road Cemetery in 1973; itself the third burial ground within the parish. With annual burials in single figures, this is hardly feasible for North Aston, and so our own PCC favours two other options:

The first is to apply to the Diocese for permission to carry out over-burials in an area to the north of the pathway from the lychgate, east of the church, where there are several readily identifiable gravestones which are more than 100 years old. In most cases, Rights of Burial safeguard a burial plot for a period of 100 years, after which time permission can be sought for re-use. Notice of intent must be published, and all efforts made to contact relatives, inform them of the plan, and determine that they have no objection to the grave being used in this way. On this basis the PCC has identified an area that could release some 30 or more plots which, in North Aston terms, could mean another 50 years or more of potential use.

As this proposal currently stands, the associated memorials would be moved. They would remain in the churchyard, but would be relocated, perhaps to the perimeter wall, or to another designated area, but not necessarily close-by their original graves. This could be done in small batches, as and when needed, but would still, ultimately, result in a change to the appearance of the churchyard. This same approach was adopted some 140 years ago, when around 25 memorials were moved and now line the south-western wall.

The alternative is to perform over-burials in an area to the south of the path, where there are a number of unmarked graves. The challenge the PCC faces here is that the legal guidelines require that those interred within a plot have to be identified so that relatives can be advised, and their approval gained, before permission – faculty – can be granted. North Aston's records for some of these older, unmarked plots, are not very accurate, making it difficult to establish not only who lies within, but how old the burials are, and precisely where they are situated. If they can be shown to predate roughly 1890 (100 years plus one generation) then permission can be obtained quite readily, but without that certainty, the chances of achieving faculty is lower, and the process could take many months.

The PCC has elected to pursue both these alternatives in an effort to keep the churchyard open for future burials, with a combined practice of using unmarked graves where the plots can be readily identified alongside over-burial within some of the marked plots. The preference is to prioritise the use of marked plots, mainly because it is easier to identify those buried beneath, and the process of obtaining faculty will be quicker. With perhaps only one vacant plot currently remaining, speed is of the essence. A complication arises, however, because these gravestones have historical, genealogical and emotional value. In common with all memorials, they were also intended to be a lasting reminder of the departed, and to move them could be said to set aside the wishes of those who wanted their loved ones to be remembered.

There is an alternative, but it requires special dispensation. Trialled by the City of London Cemetery in Newham, this process involves deepening the grave to be over-buried. Remains found during the excavations are then returned to the base of the grave, and the new burial placed on top. This differs from over-burial, which makes full use of space within a grave plot without disturbing the original remains and has been practised for hundreds of years. Over-burial is also how “family plots” are normally used. However, the City of London approach also differs from a regular over-burial in that the original headstone is then reversed and reinstated, sometimes with a fresh inscription on the blank face or, more usually, with a new gravestone abutted directly onto the old.

This ensures that the original memorial remains in place, while allowing fresh burials to take place and be suitably remembered. Over 2000 plots have been reused at Newham in this way, and the policy has since been adopted by other cemeteries around the UK. It is, though, a contentious issue, and not without its detractors, who dislike the fact that the original burial is disturbed. A parliamentary paper published in 2017 suggests that legal change to facilitate this kind of re-use is on the way, but obtaining permission at the moment is a lengthy and protracted process. Here in North Aston, where so few plots remain vacant, the PCC can't wait for the cogs of Government to grind around to a satisfactory conclusion, and they need a workable policy in place now.

There are, I'm sure, many here who hope to be buried in St Mary's, even if they are not regular churchgoers, and the PCC's deliberations will ensure that this remains possible for years to come. I have published this because I believe most North Aston residents are unaware of what has been decided. I have also done so with the full knowledge of the Vicar, although have had to accept that he has reservations about my own preference, which is that the PCC considers combining over-burial with the reinstatement of the historic gravestones (and provision for adjacent new memorials if desired). This appears to be permitted within the regulations, and would not only maintain the appearance of the churchyard and retain the architectural, cultural and familial heritage of the older memorials, but would also continue to honour the original occupants of each grave, treat relatives with sensitivity, and satisfy the demand for all future burials.

The Church MATTERS

Church Building Projects - Update

The long summer has meant that all the repairs on the stonework around our lady chapel windows have been successfully completed! We are very grateful for Trevor Dean and the work he has done for us. The final stage of this work will come during the winter months, when the glass from these windows will be removed, cleaned and replaced. Part of this will happen before Christmas, part after. A church building is an enormous gift in a community like ours - taking care of it is part of the way we show God's love: always here, always for everyone.

Then we look ahead to repair and restore the lychgate and provide step-free access from the car parking area right up to the church door. We have planning permission and in-principal faculty for this, and hopefully soon all the final pieces of the permissions will come through. Again, this can sound like a really practical thing, but making the building and churchyard easy for everyone to get into is also a way of showing something of God's love: some folk will never want to come in, but we work our hardest to take away anything that would stop anyone who wants to.

We need to raise some more money, but there are some grant bodies that are being helpful and we hope with their support to be able to look at this work now early next year. If anyone has further ideas about funding for us, or would simply like to support this work, please contact me.

Separate to the Building Projects, but also seeking permissions, we are taking further the process to re-use part of the church yard in order to keep it open for the village into the future. There is some work going on around this at the moment, and then we will apply for the Faculty as soon as we are able. As I said before, none of the historic gravestones right by the church will be moved, and we will only move a small number of memorials as necessary in order not to alter the look of the church yard. We are doing our very best to serve the whole community in continuing to provide this beautiful pastoral place in the midst of our village. Always here, always for everyone.

Harvest Festival and HoverAid Abseil

Thank you to everyone for supporting our North Aston Harvest Festival and Harvest Lunch on the final weekend in September. It's always great to come together as a community and celebrate these moments in the year - and Harvest is a terrific time to remember to give thanks.

Each year we give our Harvest Festival offering away, and this year's charity is HoverAid, working with forgotten people in Madagascar. 92% of the population there live below the poverty line. HoverAid helps bring food and medicine to communities which otherwise wouldn't even have clean water. On October 6th I am taking part in a sponsored abseil for HoverAid at the Orbit at the Olympic park. That's a drop of 262 feet - and it's a 'freefall abseil', meaning it's simply down an open rope, rather than against a wall! Please go to www.wonderful.org and look for my name in in order to support HoverAid further. Sometimes showing that God's love is for everyone takes us out of our comfort zone - but that can do a lot of good! At time of writing, we've already raised over £1,000.

All Souls & All Saints

Our autumn United Benefice Service this year will be at Tackley on November 4th, when we gather at 5.30pm to give thanks for all God's people. All Souls & All Saints are lovely festivals in the year, reminding us to cherish the memory of those who have gone before us, and also to remember our place in God's family: we have our part to play in the great story of life and faith, and others will come after us too. We sing, we pray, we remember. Come and join us in Tackley Church on November 4th.
