Notes from the Ch2ir

Fête Fever has well and truly begun and we need your help! Please have a look at the list below and see if you can help us with any of the things we need. I look forward to seeing lots of you at 6pm on the 12th, for setting-up, and even more on Saturday 13th!

Fête Timings

The fete will be happening a little earlier than in past years, and will start at 1.30pm, in the hope that more people will take advantage of the food and refreshments on offer. The closing time has also been brought forward to 4pm.

Defibrillator Training

A reminder to anyone interested in being trained up on the defibrillator and/or the speedometer - please do let me know if you're able to help, as dates will be set soon for sessions on both of these.

Next Village Meeting

The Forum meeting will be held on August 29th at 7.30pm in The Old Bakery. If there's anything you'd like adding to the agenda, please let us know.

You can telephone Lucinda on 340588

or co-chair Eileen on 340957,

or email: chair@north-aston.co.uk

Lucinda

YOUR FETE NEEDS YOU!!

Are you able to help with donations for any of the following vital Fête ingredients ...

Raffle & Tombola - Please can donations be taken to Linda Brown at 2 New Cottages, beside The Green.

Tea Tent & Refreshments - We need a selection of home-made cakes, biscuits and pastries to sell on the day. Please call 01869 340588 to let us know what delicious treats you could bake!

Bookstall & White Elephant - Please can you take your donations to the Old Bakery, where they can be stored and sorted. Please (please, please!) can you make sure that items are in good condition and sellable. We need quality items that visitors will be keen to buy, and the Fête is not an excuse to save on a trip to Ardley.

We are particularly keen to find antiques and collectables for the White Elephant, from Victorian to Vintage. Books, CDs, DVDs and Computer Games are also very welcome on the Bookstall, but no videos, please.

Games - If you haven't already volunteered, and would like to get involved, we're still looking for volunteers to help run stalls on the day. If we have more volunteers than we have games, so much the better, as we can then rotate the staff, and everyone gets to enjoy the day.

Gazebos - If you have one of those Easy-Up gazebos that we could borrow for the day, that would be fantastic. Whether it's rain or shine, shelter is always a great thing to have come Fête Day!

Tug-of-War - The rivalry between neighbouring villages is getting quite intense. If you haven't already been press-ganged into the squad, and feel the need to let off some summer steam, then contact Mark.

Setting up - It goes without saying that if you want to get involved with setting up or tidying away, then please do let Lucinda Fuoco know as soon as you can. We would love your help ... and many hands make light work!

We will be setting up on The Green from 6pm on Friday 12th July, so please do come along!

Events

Deddington Farmers' Market

The Farmers' Market this month will be on Saturday 28th July, between 9am and 12.30pm. Deddington has one of the best farmers' markets in the country, with over 40 stalls offering quality local produce. This not only includes our very own North Aston Organics, but bread, beer, crafts, eggs, flowers, fish, fruit, meat, preserves and ready-made meals. Please support them!

Tug-of-War ... Strong Volunteers Needed!

The second round of this year's Tug-of-War, North Aston v Duns Tew, will take place at the Fête on Saturday 13th. North Aston again took the honours at last month's Duns Tew Fête, but only a win this month will enable the village to retain the trophy. By invitation, Somerton will also be entering a team. If you would like to be in the North Aston squad, pulling the rope for community pride, please contact Mark Stay asap. Telephone 347806.

Ringing the Changes

Following on in the rope-pulling theme, the North Aston Ringers are still in need of fresh recruits to learn the ancient art of campanology! No experience necessary and you don't need to be a regular churchgoer! For more information contact Jeremy on 340105 or email jeremytaylor@north-aston.co.uk.

Bloxham Rally

Just in time to remind everyone that it's the Bloxham Steam Rally this weekend, 29th/30th June, 10am to 5pm.

Is society becoming more self obsessed?

Tuesday July 16th, 7.30 pm, Old Bakery

The next get-together for the increasingly active North Aston Discussion Group will take place on 16th July in the Old Bakery. Pop down for an evening of relaxed socialising over a glass of wine. For more information, please email Tony on furniturechat@gmail.com or call (01869) 347767

North Aston Nature Notes

With Stephen Rees

June was a good month for us - for outings and for spots!

We had a long weekend at our secret kitchen garden camp site and had two good mountain bike rides, one short walk around a lake and through two old pasture meadows. Those meadows were absolutely full of orchids and other flowers, as well as numerous grasses and sedges. The walk took us to a pub and a pint and then a walk back in the rain.

On one of the bike rides we stopped in a gateway for a drink (water) and, looking across the hedge, I counted 19 Jackdaws pecking at something in the grass. The collective name for a group of Jackdaw is a "Clattering". I love these old names!

Back home and two nice things to report. The first was a spot I made a couple of weeks ago on a Spindle Tree by the side of a road. It was totally covered in cobwebs. At first I thought someone had sprayed it with that Halloween spray-on cobweb, but the next day I saw a Hawthorn hedge with the same thing ... covered totally in cobwebs for about 15 yards.

I had never seen this before, so asked Amy in our office to Google it. Turns out that it's not caused by spiders, but the caterpillars of the Ermine Moth. These hatch out by the thousand on Hawthorn, Blackburn and Spindle, then set-to and cover the hedge or tree with their silk, mainly as protection from birds. They can then eat all the leaves inside the web before pupating and turning into beautiful snowy-white moths and flying away.

Talking of Amy, she managed to see three hedgehogs in her garden the other night, and she hears them grunting and rustling around quite regularly. Lucky her! There are fewer and fewer about these days ... and the same seems to be true of cuckoos, certainly around here. No one else has told me they've heard one around North Aston, although I did chance to see one; it flew directly over me on a farm the other side of Banbury. If anyone has seen or heard a cuckoo this year, please let me know.

The Elderflower is out, smelling and looking nice. Wendy will make cordial next week. It tastes lovely, especially with gin, and it keeps well. Shame that the gin doesn't! As soon as we open a bottle it just seems to evaporate away. Strange that.

These last weeks I've seen a fair few young Foxes dead on the roads. It happens every year, as the juveniles head away from home, looking for their own territory. It also happens with Badgers. When the new young are born, the sow kicks out last year's youngsters, and they go off looking for somewhere to create a new sett, and often they get caught as they cross over on the roads.

I have found three nests this month, but not belonging to birds. One was a bumble bee nest, created down by the side of where I park my van. Another was a wasp's nest in a hole in the grass, next to our greenhouse, and the third was a bee nest under the roots of the big oak in the middle of the field below us.

When we were kids growing up in North Aston we all used to go "bird nesting"; looking for the nests and taking an egg home to blow. Fred had the biggest collection - not because he was better than us, but because he used to skive off school more than we did! My prize eggs were Moorhens' eggs that I would carry home in my hat and mum would fry for Dad and me on a Saturday morning. If we did this this now we would get hung, drawn and quite rightly quartered, but it was different then ... there were hundreds of moorhens, but then some idiot decided it would be a good idea to let loads of mink escape and they decimated the wildlife along our little river.

Well, I think that's it for June. We're off to Scotland camping next week, so hopefully we will see something different to tell you about next month.

Steve, Wendy & Penny

PS. Has anyone seen a House Martin this year? We have a few Swallows but no Martins ... and PPS, who owns the flipping Peacock that keeps me awake every night?!!

(Apparently, the Peacock has trekked over from Grange Farm, and has been returned several times ... but keeps on coming back to North Aston.)

Landlord greed and peasant misery in North Aston!

When the Anne family came from London and acquired the North Aston estate in c1440, it was then a traditional English lowland shire manorial estate, organised in about the same way that it had been since Anglo Saxon times.

Three large open fields that were cultivated in strips by peasants with copyhold tenure paid for by their labour and produce, who also had free access to the common pasture and meadow, as well as to the woodland, the river, the village pond, etc. Subsistence continued in this way for generation after generation, and looked likely to continue. However, the Annes had different ideas.

Sheep, wool and cloth had formed the basis of England's wealth already for nearly 300 years and the export markets in Flanders, Germany, Italy and beyond were still growing strongly. As a result production and profits continued to increase, and the price of land rose year after year. Huge wool fortunes were being made and it's very clear that the Annes almost immediately saw that they were missing out and decided to do what many of their neighbours had done and go for sheep.

For sheep production you need well-drained enclosed pasture, and so they began to erect their wattle enclosures across the arable strips and common land, making quickthorn hedges and stone walls behind them, and enclosing them with drainage ditches. They eventually dealt with the troublesome fact that Bradenstoke Priory owned about 300 acres dotted around the estate by signing a lease with the Priory and so effectively controlling them.

The Annes became increasingly rich. However, everywhere these enclosures were made, the old peasant families, the commons, suffered badly. The traditional compact between them and the lord of the manor was shattered. Now excluded from their land, they starved, and they mostly left.

This is one of the biggest English social history stories of the 100 years from 1450 to 1550, a period in itself of huge change and challenge. The rise of the capitalistic graziers, the aggregation and enclosure of open arable along with more efficient farming techniques, the immense growth of the cloth industry (with exports nearly tripling in the 50 years to 1550) brought staggering wealth to whole new classes of men as well as to the newer and older landed families. It's been estimated that there were something like 11 million sheep at pasture in the mid-16th century; the flock masters needed only men, boys and dogs to manage them, and the old peasantry suffered terrible times. It's been estimated that up to 300,000 peasants straggled off the land, many into towns and cities, and there either lived in extreme poverty or died from starvation.

Although a number of Acts were passed during the period, supported by powerful men at Court, in Parliament and in the Church, to limit or prevent further enclosures, they had little effect; the landowners were too powerful and the Acts came too late. This dreadful situation was at the heart of the great fracture in English society leading to the uprisings of the late 1540s, culminating in Kett's Rebellion at Norwich in 1549, clinically suppressed by Warwick.

We know about what happened in North Aston because the Priory brought actions in the Oxford Court against the Annes, which didn't succeed (they were too powerful locally). Eventually the Prior brought a Complaint against the Annes in the Star Chamber (a court that was supposed to enforce laws against powerful people) in which he charged the Annes with having enclosed about 700 acres, including some of the Priory's own land. Ploughs and ox teams had been thrown out, houses abandoned and fallen down and the Priory's representatives had been prevented from gaining access to the land or the priory buildings (where the Hall now is) with 'force, might and power'. Every allegation was rebutted by John Anne and his successors, but the Prior replied that everything the Annes said was complete lies. This went on slowly backwards and forwards for perhaps 20 years, leading into the 1520s when sentiment was turning against the monasteries; Bradenstoke was suppressed in 1539.

The great wool and cloth gravy train ceased absolutely abruptly in 1550, but its demise had been building for some time. The widespread use of poorer pastures, themselves overcrowded, led to a progressive decline in England's famous fine wool quality, debasement of the currency led to turmoil in foreign markets, cloth quality didn't keep up with foreign market expectations, English export duties kept rising and now there were also continental import duties, and other countries, notably Spain, were producing finer wool and cloth at better prices. Suddenly, with perhaps 75% of the land devoted to pasture, there wasn't enough arable to feed a rising population. There was huge rural unemployment, poverty and hunger, manufacturing centres lost trade and people, land rents rose, there was inflation, and all of this created extreme misery. This lasted for perhaps 20 years, until things began to come back into balance and other forms of manufacture and sources of trade were developed.

The Annes then fell on hard times and leased out much of the land. Finally, in about 1556, Grace, the last Anne daughter, married John Brooke - a wealthy man from Shropshire, his money brought things under control, and their descendants owned the estate for another 150 years. We know about them, but virtually nothing about the peasant families whose lives were destroyed. How different things are today!

From Thames Valley Police

A little while since we caught up on advice notices from TVP, so here's a round-up ...

Burglary in Adderbury

TVP is appealing for information relating to an Adderbury break-in at about 2.30 am on Monday 27 May. Offenders gained entry to a house on the High Street, and stole items including gold pocket watches, engagement and wedding rings, locket (one with gold sovereign) and other items of jewellery.

If you were a witness to any suspicious behaviour, or have been offered items like these, please call the 24-hour enquiry centre on 101, quoting reference: 43190158721.

As with all such cases, if you don't want to speak directly to police you can contact Crimestoppers anonymously on 0800 555 111. No personal details are taken, information is not recorded, and you won't need to attend court as a witness.

TalkTalk & Virgin Media

Action Fraud has received hundreds of reports recently about fake emails purporting to be from TalkTalk and Virgin Media. The emails state that the recipient's account is either in credit and they're owed a refund, or on the verge of disconnection. The links in the emails lead to malicious websites, so the usual advice applies. Never click on the links or attachments in suspicious emails, and never respond to messages that ask for your personal or financial details.

Bogus Parking Offences

More fake emails advising of fictitious parking offences. The email may be entitled something along the lines of "Notice To Ticket Keeper #9827312481", with a poorly written message suggesting that the email is a reminder notice advising that a parking attendant had reasonable cause to believe that a parking violation transpired on their client's private land. Standard T&Cs are quoted, together with a date for the alleged offence and a link to view "photos" depicting the violation. The recipient is encouraged to pay quickly in order to avoid further charges.

TV Licence Scam

Yet more fake emails, this time purporting to advise you that your automatic TV Licence payment has not been processed correctly by your bank. There have been loads of these in recent weeks, and unlike others, some are very convincing, with quality graphics, cleverly worded, and with all the appearance of being genuine. Clicking the links lead to sites where personal and financial information is stolen.

Don't Unsubscribe!

In all cases of spam or junk emails, resist the temptation to "unsubscribe". All this does is confirm to the scammers that the email address is live, and you'll simply receive more. Only unsubscribe from legitimate websites or organisations.

Tractor Crime

There has recently been a spate of thefts from tractors and farm vehicles in this area. Land owners and farmers are advised to be vigilant and ensure that they remove all valuables, specifically sat-navs, from their vehicles.

If you have information on a non-urgent crime, please call 101. In an emergency, 999!

Broadband

An opportunity to bring Full Fibre Broadband to North Aston!

Superfast broadband, or Fibre to the Cabinet (FTTC) was recently delivered to the village, and some residents have benefited from it. A new government scheme now aims to drive forward the next broadband technology; Fibre to the Premises (FTTP), starting in places, like our village, where suppliers are unlikely to reach soon.

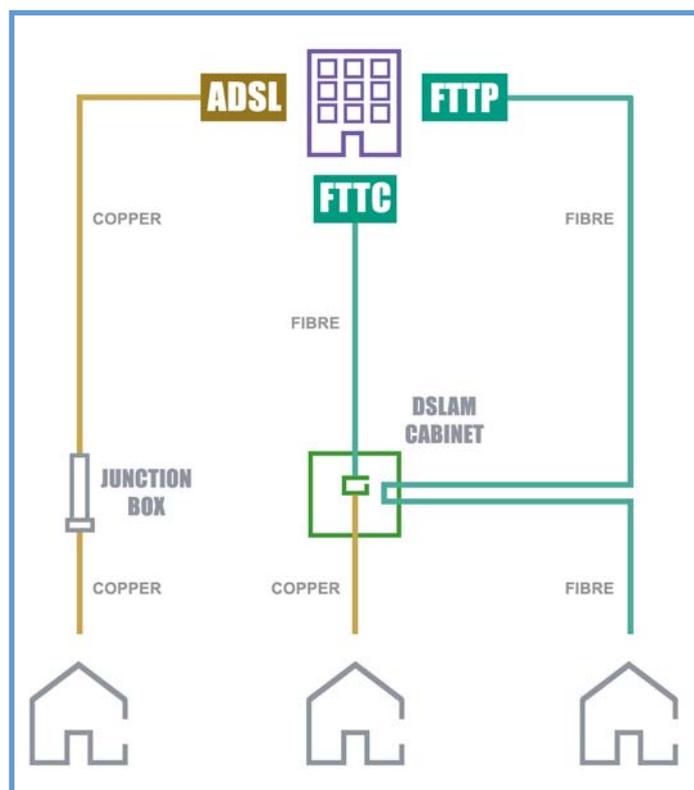

FTTP can provide much faster and more reliable broadband by using fibre-optic cables right to the customer.

This new scheme offers the village an opportunity to be amongst the first in the country to get FTTP to every household that wants it. The team working on the District Heating project would like to see if a project to bring FTTP to North Aston would be viable.

Background

There are three main types of broadband currently available in the UK:

- ADSL: Copper phone lines run from the exchange to a junction box, and copper (or aluminium) cables run from there to each home. North Aston had this prior to 2017.
- FTTC: Much faster than ADSL. Fibre-optic cables transfer data from the exchange to a local DSLAM cabinet (like the one on The Green) and then conventional cables connect each home to the cabinet. This is the system currently employed in the village.
- FTTP: Significantly faster than FTTC. Fibre-optic cables are employed throughout, only using the DSLAM cabinet as a kind of junction box.

FTTP has all sorts of potential benefits. It offers much higher download speeds and is more reliable than FTTC. It makes working from home easier, plus it means you can have multiple devices connected to the internet without your broadband speeds slowing down and it makes it easier to watch films online, especially in high definition. It's likely that people will start to look for access to FTTP when they're making decisions about where to live or work.

Additionally, it's possible that an FTTP project for the village could look to move the overhead telephone lines into ducts underground.

Opportunity

Unless we take advantage of the government scheme, it's likely that the village will be low down the priority list for suppliers to start offering FTTP.

Rather than waiting for suppliers, we could use a generous government voucher scheme to get FTTP installed in the village very quickly, possibly combining it with the District Heating project to reduce the cost and disruption (we wouldn't need to repeat any digging!).

In order to progress our plans to get full fibre for North Aston, we need your help. We'll shortly be sending out a questionnaire asking you about your current broadband and we'd really appreciate your prompt response. As soon as we get the information back, we'll be able to see if an FTTP project for the village would be viable and hopefully we will be able to get the project moving.

Based on what we know today, we're optimistic that the village can benefit...

The View from PARK FARM

It's been another busy month at Park Farm; as well as working on our vegetable plots (pictured above) exams are also starting for a number of us, and we're all fully focused on doing as well as possible. We're looking forward to a well earned rest over the summer holidays!

It's not all been work though. We've been busy with lots of activities; we've visited theme parks, been on shopping trips to London and continued to take part in all of our sporting and youth groups.

We've been focusing on Charity as our theme of the month. We've had lots of workshops learning about different charities in the UK, and what we can do to help on a local level. With this in mind, we've started volunteering at a local retirement home, and we've loved it so much so far that we've decided to keep going after charity month has finished.

With two residents leaving in recent months, we've decided to open our doors to a new young person. She's settled in really well and we're very excited to see how she does at Park Farm. Hopefully some of you will have the chance to meet her at Parkchella, which should be happening again this summer. Details in next month's North Aston News!

The Church MATTERS

Do you Pray?

A survey was published last year that suggested just over half of us pray. And just under half of those of us who pray believe that God hears our prayers. So a fair few of us apparently pray despite thinking we are praying into the silence... A similar number (four out of ten) of those who pray believe praying simply makes you feel better as actually changes the world.

This TearFund survey showed that the most popular subject of our prayers is family, followed by simply saying thank you, and then asking for people to be healed. The big issues of the world around us (global poverty, natural disasters) are prayed for more by the young than any other age group. And personal crisis is the surest impetus to prayer.

Last month I was in Atlanta, USA, for a few weeks. I worshipped one Sunday in the Anglican cathedral there, and during the prayers the person leading said: "Let us pray for Donald, our president". My sister, at the side of me, bristled. I thought for a moment what my own response was to hearing those words. The person leading didn't say what I should pray for Mr Trump, I was simply invited to pray for him. I felt able to do so.

Why?

I prayed because to not pray is to stop being a Christian. 'Cast all your cares on God,' writes St Peter in the New Testament, 'because God cares for you.' All your cares. How many cares do you have - do we all have - in these confusing days? And how many of them do we bring to God?

But we're too unimportant. But he has better things to do than listen to me. But it wouldn't change anything.

Life is full of excuses, but also of opportunities. We can tell ourselves - and everyone else - why we won't do something to make the world better. Even if that something is as small and private as praying. Or we can do anything in our power to make a difference. Even if the only thing left to us is prayer. Because just imagine if God does listen; and just imagine if God does love us; and just imagine if he does care. Sure, different people ask for different things, but just imagine if - understanding that - part of the answer God gives is that he does make us feel better, he does change us as a first step to changing the world, and if we dare pray for everything we care about (family, healing, the enormous things in the world beyond our power too) that at the very least we might all end up so impacted by time spent with God that we approach our lives with refreshed compassion, and at the most, the world might be changed for good by the goodness of God and the power of his people. I'm thinking that praying might be worth taking that risk.

Three diary events this month: please do come to the CHOROS concert in Steeple church on Sunday July 7th at 6.30pm. CHOROS is an amazing choir - and this is such a privilege to have them in the Benefice. Don't miss out! Tickets from the village shop in Steeple or at the door. Obviously we have the Fête on July 13th - see you all there! And on Sunday July 14th at 10.30am we have a United Benefice Service here at North Aston at 10.30am - a Summer Songs of Praise. Come and sing your favourite hymns with us.

Revd Marcus Green

PS - No, I'm not telling you what my prayer for President Trump was. But I'll tell you if it gets answered.
